

How a business going through a restructure needed Sentient's services to provide training to management

the challenge

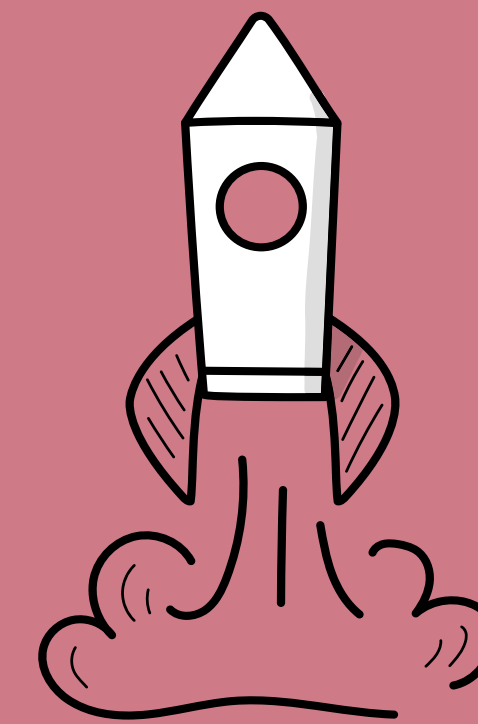

A popular Activity Centre was transitioning to becoming an independent company. They required assistance in ensuring the business was ready to stand alone and responsible in all aspects of health and safety toward its employees.

the solution

With Sentient's on-going, progressive support for the organisation. Senior managers successfully gained Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (IOSH) Managing Safely® qualifications by attending 3-day courses delivered at Sentients IOSH approved training facilities. Hence, they have become significantly more aware of the legal requirements and duties placed on the company, and management have rapidly moved to develop and implement systems and control measures.

Together with training, regular consultant visits, technical support and advice provided by Sentient, as well as conducting in-depth health and safety audits and site safety tours; the Activity Centre business very positive progression has been achieved.

the result

Through the organisations senior management team and all the staff, the drive and motivation has been exceptional, and they have made a major step change in all their Health and Safety operating systems, safe working procedures and safety culture.
